The California Environmental Protection Agency, Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC) is the lead regulatory agency overseeing Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA) corrective action activities currently under way at the Solar Turbines Incorporated (Solar) site located at 2200 Pacific Highway in San Diego, California. The DTSC is interested in assessing community knowledge and interest in this project.

The project involves RCRA corrective action activities including site assessment and site investigation exercises required to determine whether a release of hazardous materials may have occurred at the site. A RCRA Facility Assessment (RFA) has been conducted and a RCRA Facility Investigation (RFI) report will be prepared in the near future. The RFA identified areas of concern relating to the potential historic release of hazardous materials into soil and/or groundwater. The RFI report will provide a description of results of soil and groundwater investigations conducted to confirm whether a release of hazardous constituents has actually occurred from areas identified in the RFA. If a release is identified, the corrective action program requires additional actions to be undertaken in order to determine the extent of the release, the potential risk to human health and the environment presented by the release, and the appropriate means of mitigating the conditions.

We are scheduling interviews with interested parties and are mailing this letter and questionnaire to surrounding business owners, residents, and other individuals. Once the questionnaires have been evaluated and the interviews have been conducted, a Public Participation Plan (PPP) will be developed. The PPP will encompass a strategy for conveying information regarding current and future RCRA corrective action activities at the site to the surrounding community and to other interested parties. The PPP will also identify the means for involving the public in the decision-making process. Once completed, a copy of the PPP will be available for review at the DTSC and at the information repository established for the project.
